

Morgan Blake

Customer Support Specialist

Resume: 57/100 | Interview: 52/100 | Overall: 55/100

Administrative assistant seeking a first dedicated support role.

Customer communication: 61/100 (weight 30%)

Describe a frustrated customer interaction and how you responded.

I would apologize and tell the customer I will try to fix it. I once redirected a visitor to the right office. I do not have a detailed example of managing a frustrated support customer through resolution.

Troubleshooting: 47/100 (weight 30%)

Walk me through diagnosing a customer who cannot access their account.

I might ask them to send a screenshot and tell me what they typed. I have not worked with a formal identity-check process. I now understand that I should not request passwords and would ask a supervisor for the approved troubleshooting steps.

Prioritization and escalation: 50/100 (weight 20%)

How do you prioritize competing tickets and decide when to escalate?

I would answer whichever ticket I opened first unless someone called again. I cannot give an example of prioritizing a service outage or using an SLA. I would need training on the escalation rules.

Documentation and privacy: 48/100 (weight 20%)

What do you record in case notes and what information should you avoid collecting?

I usually write that I talked to the customer and whether I passed it on. I have not used a technical case-note template or redacted a screenshot. I would need clear instructions about what information is safe to store.

Limitations and follow-up

Role-specific examples are missing; scoring only illustrates evidence gaps in this demo.

Assess a coached troubleshooting scenario and train on verification, triage, and case-note standards.

No real interview, recording, perception analysis, or integrity assessment exists. All evidence is an authored fictional transcript.
